

Hi Jay,

I saw Mary's email on the mentor/mentee email thread regarding haiku book publishing options.

April 15, 2021

Here is a list to get us started on that front:

Haiku Presses/Book Publication Options

Here is what I know about the book publishing world:

One option is to self-publish a haiku collection through Lulu which is an independent book publishing platform. It is low cost and relatively easy to do. As an added bonus, you can select their Global Distribution option and simultaneously sell your book on Lulu, Amazon, Barnes & Noble, and Ingram among many other book sellers online.

Red Moon Press is one of the most well-known, larger haiku book presses out there. Here is their contact page if you have questions on submitting a haiku book to them: https://www.redmoonpress.com/catalog/contact_us.php

Some of the leading haiku journals, such as Modern Haiku, have their own press, but I don't know how it works off hand. Here is the editor's email if you want to contact him about publishing a book through their press: modernhaiku@gmail.com The editor is Paul Miller.

Bones has a Library of ebooks (PDF) that are not for sale and anyone can read them: <https://bonesjournal.com/essays/index.html> You do have to get the book accepted through Johannes S. H. Bjerg.

Here is the first page of what comes up on Google when searching "haiku chapbook publishers" to get some more ideas:
